“Original Art as Unique as You Are”

Timothy Orikri

Born and raised in Nigeria, Timothy Ufuomaefe Orikri is a multidisciplinary artist, muralist, live performance painter, and humanitarian, whose creative vision has spanned more than four decades. After immigrating to the United States in 1995, Orikri now calls Michigan and Detroit home. His art focuses on hope, harmony, compassion, and human connection through the use of vibrant colors, layered textures, and mixed media techniques that allows viewers to pause, reflect, and connect emotionally with each piece. Orikri's art has been exhibited in museums, galleries, colleges and churches throughout the country including the Charles H. Wright Museum of African American History, Michigan State University, and the St. Louis Science Center. In addition to his visual art practice, Orikri is currently developing several literary works, including a memoir, a reflective manuscript inspired by his parents, and a philosophical storytelling series entitled “Froggy Once Upon a Homeland.”
